

L4 employs distinct virulence factors for successful dissemination in western Ethiopia. Given that the functions of these newly identified genes are not well understood, it is advisable to experimentally validate their roles, particularly in the successful transmission of L4.